Lolo and Jemba were two great friends. They went to Mushanga Primary school. In this school, lunch was only for those whose parents had contributed towards their feeding.

On Friday afternoon, Jemba got so hungry that his stomach began making continuous long deep sounds. He hadn't carried anything to eat while at school that day. Lolo heard the sounds that came from his friend's stomach and sympathized with him.

"Let's go to the trading centre and buy something to eat," he said with a smile. "I have got some money."

"Wow!" Jemba said. "I'll give you a lift on my bicycle."

Unlike Jemba's parents, the parents of Lolo, once in a while, at least gave their son some money. With this money, he could buy pancakes, buns and some juice to have as lunch. He often shared this so-called lunch with his best friend.

With Lolo sitting on the carrier, Jemba got on his bicycle and rode off. The speed at which he rode was very high. He was very excited. Besides, he wanted to get back to school in time for the afternoon lessons. It was a busy road and, as Jemba sped up, he kept ringing the bicycle bell. Unfortunately, he lost his balance and they both fell off the bicycle. Lolo suffered a leg injury while Jemba had a fractured hand.

They were lucky that some passers-by rushed them to a nearby clinic. They then rang their head teacher who immediately arrived at the clinic. She thanked the nurses for treating the boys. She then informed the boys' parents about the accident.

Three weeks later, after Lolo and Jemba had got better, they returned to school. The whole school was so pleased to see them. The head teacher, however, warned all pupils against leaving school without permission. She also held a meeting with all parents to discuss the issue of school meals. Dear Uncle,

I hope this letter finds you in great health and high spirits. I want to express my heartfelt thanks for your generous support in paying for my educational tour to the game park in Uganda.

We visited Queen Elizabeth National Park, which is one of the most famous game parks in Uganda. The park is known for its stunning landscapes, diverse wildlife, and beautiful lakes. During our visit, we had the chance to see elephants, lions, and a variety of bird species, including the majestic African fish eagle.

Touring, I learned how important it is to conserve these natural habitats and protect the animals that live there and the experience has deepened my appreciation for wildlife and the environment.

Thank you once again for your generosity. I look forward to sharing more about my adventures with you when we next meet.

Your nephew,
Oscar
