Questions 51 to 55 carry 10 marks each

51. Read the passage below carefully and then answer the questions about it in full sentences.

Once upon a time, in a small village nestled in the mountains, there lived a young girl called Masiga. Masiga was fourteen years old, but her parents had already arranged for her marriage to a man thrice her age.

Masiga loved studies and had a dream of becoming a doctor one day. Unfortunately, her parents believed that her role as a daughter was to get married and start a family. They didn't see the value of educating their daughter. They thought that marriage was the best option for her.

On hearing the news about marriage, Masiga felt heartbroken. She didn't want to leave her family and friends. She did not also want to get married at such a young age which could affect her dream of becoming a doctor.

One day, a group of activists came to Masiga's village to talk about the dangers of child marriage. They explained that child marriage could lead to health problems, domestic violence and even death.

They also talked about the importance of educating a girl child and how it could lead to better opportunities in future.

With the help of the activists, Masiga managed to convince her parents to let her continue with her education and postpone marriage until she was older.

Years later, Masiga graduated from a medical school and became a successful doctor. She also found love and got married without any pressure from her family.
