SECTION B

51. Read the passage below and then answer, in full sentences, the questions that follow.

THE CRESTED CRANE

The crane builds its nest on the ground, unlike most birds that prefer the tops of trees. Dry grass is used for the building material and it is very carefully woven so that the same nest can be used year after year. The crane lays two grey-and-brown eggs each year which are bigger than ones laid by an ordinary hen. After about 65-70 days, the young chicks are hatched and start running about. As they grow up, their wind-pipe grows longer and longer until it reaches a length of about one and a half metres. This long tube is coiled up inside the adult crane's breast. When the bird sings, the sound travels through the long tube and comes out as a loud whoop-like call.

It is very interesting to watch and listen to these birds on the rare occasions when they dance. They stand in a straight line with their wings half opened. Then they move backwards and forwards, throwing their heads from side to side in the rhythm of the whoop-like music that they produce.

These birds live in groups of six to eight, usually in low-lying wet lands although they are sometimes seen on the plains. They feed on small animals of all sorts, grain and fresh grass shoots. That is why you often see them in a newly-dug field looking for young crops.

The crane walks very gently on its long legs. It is a friendly bird, quite sure of itself and never afraid of people. You can come as close as a distance of about one metre because the crane is harmless to humans. Perhaps it is because of its graceful, gentle manner that Uganda chose it to be its national emblem.

SECTION B

51. Read the story carefully and answer the questions that follow in full sentences.

It was a tiring exercise for me. I climbed up a mountain, but to realize that I could not move even a step upwards. What a terrible thing that was! I saw all alone in that world. I remember falling back on the ground but the journey was nonstop.

Just then my peace was disturbed by some noise. I woke up still half asleep and forced my eyes open. The paraffin was flowing out and fire had already caught some pieces of paper that I had left lying there. My mind then came together I realized that I have left the lamp burning on the table after reading my books.

As I looked in one of the corners of my room, I saw a creature trying to escape. I only wished I had a long stick or at least a cat in the house. It was too late. I was shouting for help but no one came to my rescue, I stood there watching helplessly.
