SECTION B: 50 MARKS

51. Read the passage below carefully and answer the questions about it in full sentences.

A long time ago, there lived two animals that were good friends. Wherever they went, they were never separated. If the lion caught prey, the rabbit would in turn search for the best wild tubers. Nobody could touch the rabbit.

One day, an animal disease plagued the forest. Almost all animals died save for the crocodiles. Saddened by the tragedy, the lion looked hungrily at rabbit and started seeing him in a different way.

This prompted the rabbit to doubt the lion and the rabbit fearfully went to stay at the river. Lion also followed Rabbit to the river. Lion then announced to Rabbit, "Tomorrow, I will eat you."

That night, Rabbit pretended to be dead near the river infested by crocodiles. At dawn, Lion checked the rabbit. Seeing the rabbit dead and covered with flies, Lion left the river disappointed. When Lion had gone, Rabbit asked the crocodiles, "How many are you?" "Many," replied the crocodile. "I don't think you are unless you all fall in line and I count you as I jump over the river," said Rabbit.

Crocodiles agreed and Rabbit crossed to the other side of the river safely. Rabbit lived but Lion eventually died of starvation. Most times friendship can be destroyed by selfish interests. The story teaches us to avoid such friendships before it is too late.

Questions:

1. What is the passage about?

2. Which two friends lived together?

3. Why do you think the lion and the rabbit mourned?
